Occupational and Environmental Factors in Infectious Disease and Updates in Occupational Health

March 6-8, 2014

This course, presented by the Division of Occupational and Environmental Medicine in the Department of Medicine at the University of California, San Francisco, is designed to provide occupational and environmental health professionals and persons from other healthrelated disciplines with a review and update of current data in occupational and environmental medicine. The first day of the curriculum will focus on Occupational and Environmental Factors in Infectious Disease. The second day and last half day will cover a multi-topic theme: Updates in Occupational and Environmental Health.

This course is approved for American Board of Preventative Medicine Maintenance of Certification credit and is a comprehensive update for occupational medicine specialists. In addition, this course is also designed to meet the needs of primary care providers and others engaged in occupational health practice and research including physicians (family physicians, general practitioners, internists, emergency medicine specialists), nurse practitioners and other nursing professionals, as well as physician's assistants, industrial hygienists, and health researchers and policy makers.

Upon completion of this course, attendees will be able to:

 Assess the importance of infectious disease processes in occupational and environmental health;

ш

- Compare medical knowledge derived from research findings, particularly from toxicological and epidemiologic investigations;
  - Integrate increased knowledge relevant to the evaluation of scientific data in the field of occupational and environmental medicine;
  - Compare diagnostic methods and treatment options for selected occupational and environmental conditions;
  - Employ regulatory management of specific work-related scenarios.
